CASE STUDY

Avoiding Costly FCC Fines & Interruption of Operations

Challenge

A packing and logistics company allowed their FCC license to expire and they needed the license for operations and security

What We Did

- Alerted the company to the fact that the FCC license had entered a termination pending status.
- Quick ascertained why the company failed to receive the FCC notifications
- Worked with the company and the FCC to complete the appropriate filing to restore the FCC license
- Successfully had the license removed from a termination pending status with the FCC
- Implemented a FCC license management process that would prevent this situation from occurring again

Result

- Allowed the company to operate on its licenses without interruption to its operations
- Saved the company the time and the cost of re-applying for frequencies and reprogramming all of their radio equipment a return on investment of 300% over the cost of our services
- Eliminated the potential for FCC fines for operating on a terminated license
